PUSH IT TO THE LIMIT

Power consumption across the province peaked at 10,419 megawatts on Wednesday, according to the Alberta Electric System Operator (AESO), breaking the summer record of 10,413 megawatts, set on Tuesday. High temperatures in Calgary and across Alberta meant plenty of air conditioners were running on maximum, which was cited as being partially responsible for pushing the grid to near capacity. CBE declined offer to be investigated by minister's staff

Navigator. Education minister suggested having his staff look into CBE's $240K deal with 'high-stakes communications firm'

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Calgary Board of Education trustees declined an offer from the provincial education minister to have his staff investigate the organization's controversial use of a third-party communications firm, a move that cost the organization nearly a quarter-million dollars during a period of financial hardship.

Instead, the seven-member trustee board voted to have the organization's legal counsel, Greg Francis, probe whether hiring Navigator Ltd. in August 2012 was appropriate and whether the contract was awarded fairly.

The entire sum of $240,000 paid to the self-proclaimed "high-stakes communications firm" came from the CBE's legal budget.

Alberta Education Minister Jeff Johnson made the offer to investigate the CBE's use of Navigator after then-trustee chair Sheila Taylor reviewed related materials provided to Metro through freedom of information requests in early May and deemed the board's relationship with the firm "not OK."

Dan Powers, Johnson's press secretary, confirmed the offering from his boss in a written statement Tuesday.

"The Minister's Office was made aware of the CBE's concerns surrounding the communications work done by a third party during the last municipal election campaign," Powers wrote. "The minister extended an offer to help the CBE determine whether the contract and the resultant work was appropriate. The offer was declined."

Powers said Alberta Education had not been presented with any information to justify intervening in the matter. When asked specifically about the reference to the municipal election, Powers responded, "I'm going to leave it at that. I'll let the CBE elaborate."

Neither current trustee chair Joy Bowen-Eyre nor vice-chair Judy Hehr responded to requests for comment by phone or email over a period of two days. The CBE media relations team also said it was operating with a limited staff during the summer and could not respond to questions posed Wednesday afternoon.

The organization did, however, issue a statement on behalf of trustees in June after they seemingly reviewed materials provided by Francis related to his Navigator probe.

"The board of trustees is satisfied that no further action is required," it read.

The CBE staff includes more than 20 communications positions, according to the organization's operating budget.

By comparison, the Calgary Catholic School District, which has about half as many kids, has said it employs two full-time members to perform similar work.

Reached this week, Taylor said she stood behind her previous comments.

"I consistently question why a quarter of a million dollars was being spent on crisis public relations when we had our own communications staff and (funding for) class sizes was being cut," she said, adding she was glad the board reviewed details of the CBE's agreement with the third-party firm.

Road construction

No direct compensation for businesses

Calgary's mayor and transportation boss say the city won't compensate local merchants for lost business during road construction but noted crews take extra measures — at extra expense — to maintain access while work continues.

Earlier this week, business owners along 14th Street SW told Metro that major roadwork along the busy stretch was cutting into their bottom lines and mused about seeking legal recourse.

Mac Logan, the city's general manager of transportation, said Wednesday the city does not have a practice of "compensating businesses directly" but goes out of its way to ensure a reasonable amount of road access.

He noted intersections are kept open and flagmen are employed to direct traffic while road construction continues on both 14th Street SW and on Edmonton Trail NE.

"That slows down the project but it does improve the access to the businesses," Logan said. "We are incurring extra public costs in order to improve the business access throughout the construction project."

Mayor Naheed Nenshi said both major road projects simply need to be done, and they'll be far from the last in Calgary.

"But we work very, very hard to ensure that access to businesses and residences — while it might be not much fun — is continued throughout these projects."

Dog bite was fault of child as well: Owner

Canine in custody. 'Both parties' were responsible for injury to seven-year-old, says Lab cross owner

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

The owner of a Labrador cross that was seized after biting a youngster on the face last week says he will fight to save his dog and alleges city bylaw officials don't have all the facts.

Jim Forbes claims he only turned his back for a minute Thursday while smoking a cigarette when his two-year-old pup Odin bit a seven-year-old boy who'd been staying at his house.

Forbes said he heard a "yelp" and turned to find the injured child climbing off Odin, who'd been cornered on the back deck of his Temple home. The boy had been chasing the dog for 15 minutes and been told multiple times to stop, Forbes said.

"I'd imagine the kid did a body slam on him, jumped on top of him," Forbes said, adding he believes "both parties" are responsible.

"When I was a kid, I was raised around dogs all the time," Forbes added. "I was told don't chase the dogs and the dogs nipped at me and I was like 'OK, I'm going to listen to my mom.'"

But Doug Anderson, a co-ordinator with the city's animal and bylaw services department, said no witnesses had come forward and his officers had to go with the information available.

"The only evidence we have for sure is a picture of a bite," he said.

Odin was seized and Forbes was charged with one count of bite to a person and two counts of having unlicensed animals.

Anderson said owners who do not believe they were at fault are encouraged to plead not guilty and let a judge rule on the matter.

Odin's fate, meanwhile, could be determined in a court hearing where bylaw officers will present findings of a behavioural assessment he's due to undergo and Forbes will have an opportunity to speak in defence of the animal.

"We try to be as much of a neutral party as possible," Anderson said. "We will present any evidence we have — good or bad to our case — to the courts."

'Serious bite'

The youngster injured in Thursday's incident sustained a "serious bite to the lip, which did result in (his) lip being glued back together," bylaw operations co-ordinator Abdul Rafih told reporters Monday.

Car enthusiasts say street-racing 'morons' give community a bad rap

Crackdown. Calgary police pledge added enforcement after nabbing weekend speedsters

JEREMY NOLAIS

Frustrations are revving up among Calgary car enthusiasts who say a small number of drivers turning city streets into racetracks are tarnishing the community as a whole.

On Monday, police said they had laid 25 charges related to stunting, speeding and equipment violations. They also pledged to do more enforcement in the weekends ahead. It's believed the drivers caught racing initially met up in a coffee shop parking lot near Barlow Trail, a common weekend hot spot for car lovers.

But James White, who's been attending the gathering for years, said the vast majority of people in the group obey the law.

"There are some morons there that still do race," he acknowledged.

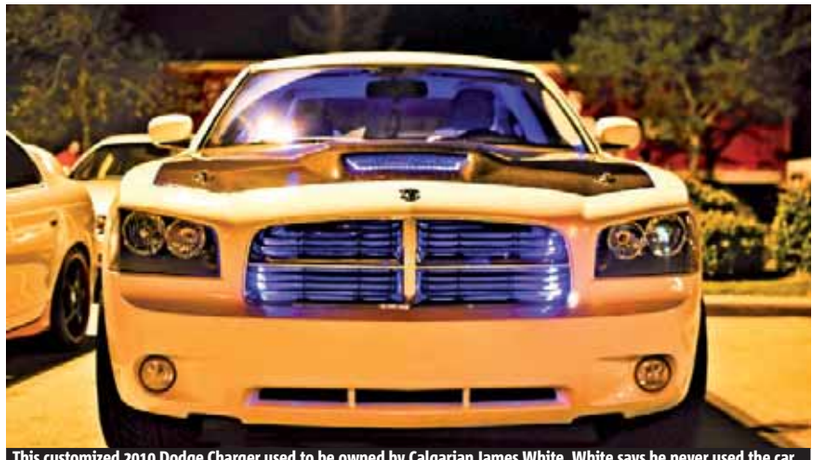
White belongs to a smaller offshoot group of vehicle enthusiasts, known as Metamorphosis. He said his group steers clear of carting alcohol and drugs to the Barlow Trail gathering, joking the craziest his gang gets is when they break out the juice and pop.

"We basically hang out, have a good time.… One time I brought a tailgate barbecue," he said.

White says his rides are purely for show.

Across the city, hundreds of vehicle enthusiasts gather weekly in the parking lot of the Grey Eagle Casino for Wild Wednesdays.

Scott Thomson, president of the Alberta Mustangs Auto Club, said on hot nights more than 300 vehicles are on display and casino staff serve hot dogs and fixings for those taking in the festivities.



This customized 2010 Dodge Charger used to be owned by Calgarian James White. White says he never used the car to race on city streets. METRO FILE

He said prospective street racers would be hard-pressed to find an opponent at the event, noting many that turn out are in their 50s or 60s.

Thomson said many of the car-lovers he knows saved their need for speed for the weekly Secret Street event on Friday nights at Race City Motorsport Park, which closed in 2011. Nowadays, many drivers have to head far from Calgary for their fix of organized racing.

Thomson deemed reports of street racing "absolutely terrible."

"I can assure you that most of the guys that do the street racing, they aren't car guys," he said.

Dodge Charger

Metro snapped a picture of James White's previous ride, a customized 2010 Dodge Charger, while visiting the Barlow gathering in the summer of 2012. That night, a group of more than a dozen participants broke away from the gathering and ventured to an industrial road on the city's outskirts to race their cars for more than an hour.

Power grid nearing capacity in Alberta

Heating up. Factors affecting the grid include the heat, low wind activity and offline generators

As the heat rises, so does the load on Alberta's power grid.

The Alberta Electric System Operator (AESO) said Wednesday the system is operating near full capacity due to the heat, low wind and some generators being offline.

"Usually, we can generate a little more wind," said Angela Anderson, communication adviser for AESO. "We're looking at really low wind-generation."

Typically, the demand for power increases in the summer and winter, Anderson added, and is highest around the supper hour.

On an average day in Calgary, peak demand is 1,350 megawatts, said Enmax communications manager Leanne Pottinger, but over the last couple of days it's been recorded at just under 1,600 megawatts.

Pottinger said this time of year is a great time to barbecue instead of using electric ovens.

"That's a great way to reduce energy during the supper hour," she said.

Anderson said AESO is closely monitoring the demands on the system.

"At this time, we're still able to keep all of the lights on in the province," she said. JESSICA PATTERSON/FOR METRO

Lady Luck must be visiting. Province full of lottery winners in the last week

It's four times lucky for Alberta in lottery games in the last week.

Emery and Lorraine Cressman of Calgary are the latest multimillion-dollar winners in the province with their Lotto 6-49 ticket worth $7 million.

Emery says he thought he and his wife had won $70,000 when he checked the ticket for the July 19 draw.

It wasn't until he got home and checked the numbers on a computer that he realized the prize was much, much more than that.

The windfall started last week when Bill and Andrea Groner of Edmonton revealed that they were the mystery winners of a $50-million Lotto Max draw last December.

Then, on Tuesday, Brad and Amanda Kelly of Lacombe in central Alberta were revealed as holding the $18-million winning ticket for the June 25 Lotto 6-49. There was also a $2-million Scratch 'n Win prize winner from Alberta in the last week. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary's natural gas buses to get new $200M home

Transit. City made successful application to federal grant program for garage

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Calgary will build a new garage to house up to 400 natural gas buses "before 2019," city officials said Wednesday after the federal government committed nearly $48.4 million to the project.

The facility, to be built as a public-private partnership, is to cost "in the order of $200 million," according to Mac Logan, the city's general manager of transportation, though the final price tag could vary depending on the specifics of the procurement.

City council has committed $50 million so far to build the facility on a site near the interchange connecting Stoney Trail and Deerfoot Trail.

The city's existing garages are already full, with about 185 more buses than indoor parking spaces. Some buses that are stored outside in the winter have to be kept running overnight in extreme cold.

The new facility is to include 40 maintenance bays as well as on-site natural gas compression for the hundreds of new buses the city plans to buy that run on the alternative fuel.

The city bought four compressed natural gas (CNG) buses from two different suppliers last year and is about to wrap up its testing of the vehicles.

Initial projections suggest CNG buses each cost about $40,000 more than diesel buses, but they have longer life spans and burn about $11,000 less per year in fuel.

Logan said council will receive a full report on the pilot project in the fall.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi said the city aims to lock in a low price with a large-volume natural gas supplier.

"It's possible to write pretty long-term contracts for natural gas supply — longer, in most cases, than it's possible to write for diesel," he said.

Details

- Construction of the new natural gas bus storage facility is expected to begin in June 2016 and wrap up by November 2018.
- The city doesn't expect to fill the garage with natural gas buses as soon as it opens, and the facility will house older diesel buses as well.
- Calgary Transit's 1,100 diesel buses burned about 28 million litres of fuel in 2013, at a cost of $28 million.

Physiotherapy can speed concussion recovery: U of C research

Dr. Kathryn Schneider demonstrates some cervical spine and vestibular system physiotherapy with student Chevonne Codd. JESSICA PATTERSON/FOR METRO

New research at the University of Calgary suggests physiotherapy can help speed healing for people who have suffered concussions.

"We found the individuals who received the physiotherapy treatment were four times more likely to be medically cleared to return to sport within eight weeks," said Dr. Kathryn Schneider, a researcher and physiotherapist with the faculty of kinesiology's Sport Injury Prevention Research Centre.

Schneider's study, published in the British Journal of Sport Medicine, examined 31 patients from the ages of 12 to 30 who had persistent symptoms of dizziness, neck pain and headache following a sports-related concussion.

Her study suggests this particular approach may be of great benefit to those suffering from long-term concussion symptoms.

Ash Kolstad, 17, suffered his first concussion when he was 12 in a hockey game. After he'd recovered from that, he suffered a second concussion when he was hit from behind in another game and his head went into the boards. His symptoms got worse.

"I started off with dizziness, head pounding, and light and sound sensitivity," he said Wednesday.

Then he began suffering from nausea and an inability to concentrate.

He was a perfect candidate for Schneider's study.

"It's very helpful," Kolstad said of the physiotherapy treatment. "My dizziness went away and the light and sound sensitivity are totally gone."

U.S. first lady calls for attitude change at leadership summit

New direction. Michelle Obama pushes African leaders to change harmful attitudes towards women and girls

Michelle Obama speaks to the Washington Fellowship for Young African Leaders on Wednesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michelle Obama called on young African leaders to change traditional attitudes and beliefs that harm girls and women, adding that educating and making women financially literate is not enough.

"No country can ever truly flourish if it stifles the potential of its women and deprives itself of the contributions of half of its citizens," Obama said.

The first lady spoke Wednesday to the inaugural class of young African fellows who are getting six weeks of leadership training in the United States as part of the Mandela Washington Fellowship.

"Leadership is about creating new traditions that honour the dignity and humanity of every individual. Leadership is about empowering all of our people — men, women, boys and girls," she said.

"When we commit to that kind of leadership across the globe, that is when we truly start making progress on girls' education."

Obama said Africa has made great strides such as more girls attending school, women starting businesses and more women serving in parliaments.

After her remarks, she held a roundtable discussion with more than 30 African leaders to discuss girls' education.

Motorists entitled to ticket refunds

An administrative error is being blamed for a million-dollar mistake in Winnipeg's photo-radar program that will see city police and the province refund or cancel 2,574 speeding tickets.

The refunded and cancelled tickets are worth roughly $1 million, Aitken said. Only one photo-radar location had the glitch.

Crop circles. Mysterious designs attract thousands to German farmer's field

Thousands of people are trekking to a Bavarian farmer's field in Raisting, Germany, to check out a mysterious set of crop circles.

The ornate design was discovered by a balloonist last week and news of the find quickly spread online.

Farmer Christoph Huttner, who owns the wheat field near Weilheim, couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday but told the dpa news agency Tuesday he didn't create the circle himself.

He suggests that students on summer holiday may have cut the image with a 75-metre diameter into his field.

The news agency says thousands of visitors have come to sing, dance and even swing pendulums in the giant image.

Huttner says he's not yet sure whether he will leave the circle in his field.

Toronto police officer faces another charge in Sammy Yatim shooting

Attempted murder. The Crown added the allegation to an already existing murder charge

The Toronto cop charged with second-degree murder in the streetcar shooting of teenager Sammy Yatim last summer has been charged again.

On Wednesday, the Crown revealed that it had added the charge of attempted murder to the indictment of Const. James Forcillo, leaving him in an apparent contradiction: Prosecutors claim he both murdered and attempted to murder Yatim.

Yatim was killed after brandishing a small knife on the streetcar last July. Once passengers evacuated the vehicle, several police officers approached the open front doors and ordered Yatim to drop the knife.

Several videos of the event show a single officer — later identified as Forcillo — firing nine times, leaving the boy crumpled on the floor. Yatim was then Tasered and handcuffed before being taken to hospital.

After a court appearance Wednesday morning, Forcillo's lawyer Lawrence Gridin said the new charge indicates weakness in the Crown's case.

"The Crown's changing theory just highlights that this case is by no means clear-cut, and we are looking forward to presenting a strong defence," Gridin wrote in an email to Torstar News Service.

Police association president Mike McCormack claimed the two charges are contradictory.

"We're scratching our heads; the public is scratching their heads; no one understands it," he said. "To us, it's like throwing all sorts of stuff at the wall and seeing what sticks."

After discussing the case with Forcillo's lawyers, McCormack speculated that the new charge might reflect the fact that the officer felt threatened by Yatim.

"It seems Forcillo could have been justified in firing some, but not all, of the shots," he said.

Legal experts say charging the same person with murder and attempted murder is very rare. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Harper takes hard line on Hamas

Prime Minster Stephen Harper
MATT SMITH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

An unflinching Prime Minister Stephen Harper reiterated his government's hard line on Wednesday on Hamas, Russia and Chinese cyberattacks.

Harper said Hamas is solely responsible for the death and destruction in Gaza following almost a month of fighting between Israel and Hamas militants.

His remarks, made following a job training announcement in northern Saskatchewan, came as the United States and the United Nations condemned the shelling of a UN school that was sheltering displaced Palestinians on the Gaza Strip. At least 17 people were killed.

"Obviously no one likes to see the suffering and loss of life that has occurred," Harper told reporters in Air Ronge.

"That said, we hold the terrorist organization Hamas responsible for this. They have initiated and continue this conflict and continue to seek the destruction of the state of Israel."

Some 3,300 Palestinians, including many women and children, were taking refuge in the school building in the Jabalya refugee camp when it came under fire around dawn on Wednesday, said the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

The attack prompted the U.S. to condemn the shelling, though it did not single out Israel by name.

Israel strikes UN school, shopping area in Gaza City

Middle East crisis. Palestinian officials say at least 17 killed in latest attack on UN facility

Israeli artillery shells tore through the walls of a UN school crowded with sleeping war refugees and back-to-back explosions rocked a market filled with shoppers Wednesday as Israel's stepped-up campaign against Gaza's Hamas rulers claimed at least 116 Palestinian lives.

After the strikes near the shopping area in Gaza City, bodies lay scattered in the streets as the wounded screamed for help. "Where is the ambulance?" one man moaned as he lay on the blood-soaked ground.

Some 3,300 Gazans seeking refuge from the fighting had been crammed into the UN school at the Jebaliya refugee camp when a series of Israeli artillery shells hit before daybreak, turning a classroom where families had been sleeping into a scene of bloodied clothing, bedding and debris.

Palestinian health officials said at least 17 people were killed and 90 wounded in the school attack — the latest in a series of strikes the United Nations says has hit UN facilities that are supposed to be safe zones in the 23-day-old war.

Israel's military said no UN facility had been intentionally targeted during Wednesday's operation, but troops had responded to Hamas mortar fire directed at Israeli soldiers near the school. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flight 17. Clashes keeping experts from crash site to recover bodies of victims

Almost two weeks after Malaysia Airlines Flight 17 was blown out of the sky, the remains of some passengers are feared rotting in the 32 C midsummer heat, deepening the frustration of relatives desperate to recover the bodies of their loved ones.

Fighting between Ukrainian forces and separatist rebels has kept away international police charged with securing the site, a sprawling area of farmland and villages. And until it's secured, there is no way for forensic experts to recover the bodies or gather debris for analysis. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Activists turn deputy PM's comments into a laughing matter

Women in Turkey have taken to social media to protest against comments by the country's deputy prime minister that "women should not laugh aloud in public."

Women were sharing photos on Twitter of themselves laughing Wednesday after Deputy Prime Minister Bulent Arinc's comments that not laughing out loud in public is among requirements of being an honourable woman.

Canan Arin, a prominent women's rights activist, said it was a pity Turkish women have to respond to such "silly comments" when they have more serious problems to deal with, including frequent male violence against women. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prison-bound drone's struggle to smuggle leads to man's arrest

Officials are looking for a person they say helped try to use a drone to sneak phones, marijuana and other contraband into a maximum-security prison.

Officials found a crashed drone in bushes outside Lee Correctional Institution in Bishopville, S.C. At the site, Corrections Department spokeswoman Stephanie Givens says officers on April 21 also found the phones, marijuana and tobacco products.

One man has been arrested and charged with trying to give contraband materials to inmates, and authorities are looking for a second suspect. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Families of lost Ixil Mayans find closure at last

Finally at rest. Thirty-one Mayans killed during Guatemala civil war laid to rest during mass ceremony in the province of Quiche

The remains of 31 Ixil Mayans killed more than three decades ago during the height of Guatemala's civil war were laid to rest Wednesday in the country's western highlands amid the sounds of a violin and wafts of incense.

Hundreds joined in a procession that carried small wooden boxes containing the remains to a cemetery in Xecax, the village in Quiche province where the massacre happened.

Forensic experts first exhumed the remains four years ago but were able to identify only eight of the victims through DNA tests. The bodies of those identified were returned to their relatives' homes in the village for a traditional memorial service before the mass burial.

Vicente Brito, 70, lost his mother, father and a daughter. Of the three, forensic experts identified his father, Pedro Brito. Pedro Brito's photograph was placed on the wooden box containing his remains.

"He was my father and I look like him. It's good to have found him," Brito said, crying.

RCMP officer back to work after June shooting

One of the two New Brunswick RCMP officers wounded in shootings last month in Moncton has returned to work.

Const. Eric Dubois spoke to the media Wednesday for the first time since the June 4 shootings while he was participating at a golf tournament at Royal Oaks Golf Club in Moncton.

The tournament was organized in memory of the three other Mounties who were killed in the shootings.

Dubois said he is recovering from his injuries faster than he expected and was happy to participate in the tournament, which featured a moment of remembrance for constables Fabrice Gevaudan, Dave Ross and Doug Larche.

"Everybody was praying for me and I can tell you that it did work because my healing went so fast. Everyone around me says it's incredible how fast everything went back to normal," said Dubois.

"I'm not superhuman. It's because people were praying and wishing me good stuff and it works."

Dubois added that he's happy to be back at work.

"That's what I want to do — be on the street and fight crime every day and make sure that when you go to work or you go to a restaurant, you can have a safe environment,'' he said.

Justin Bourque is charged with three counts of first-degree murder and two counts of attempted murder. He is scheduled to return to provincial court Thursday in Moncton following a psychiatric assessment. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ebola outbreak. Liberian president closes nation's schools as fear grows

Liberia's president is closing the nation's schools and ordering non-essential government employees to stay home as the country battles an Ebola outbreak.

Several airlines have already halted their flights into Liberia amid a rising number of patients with one of the world's most virulent diseases.

President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf also said late Wednesday she would stay home from a summit of African leaders in Washington this week to help combat the crisis.

At least 129 people have died in Liberia from Ebola, and the disease is blamed for more than 672 deaths across West Africa.

Among the dead was an American man of Liberian descent who was working for the Liberian government. He later flew to Nigeria, where he died Friday.

Human trafficking

U.S. resolution drafted to end trafficking in China

The U.S. House Foreign Affairs Committee endorsed a resolution on Wednesday calling on China to immediately end what it calls state-sanctioned harvesting of human organs from prisoners. China said the panel was making "false and irresponsible accusations."

Human rights groups have long criticized China for taking organs from executed prisoners, the source of most transplanted organs. The resolution, which now goes to the full House, contends there are "persistent and credible reports'' of state-sanctioned organ harvesting.

Chinese Embassy spokesman Geng Shuang expressed strong dissatisfaction with the resolution. He said every organ transplant requires the consent of the donor in written form.

"The so-called organ harvesting from death-row prisoners is totally a lie fabricated by Falun Gong," Geng said by email, urging lawmakers to view the movement as a cult and to stop "supporting and conniving" with it.

East Africa. British Airways sued over allegations pilot sexually abused girls

A London law firm representing 16 girls in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania said Wednesday it is initiating legal proceedings against British Airways over allegations that one of its pilots sexually abused the girls.

A mother of two girls who were allegedly abused told The Associated Press that during layovers in Kenya, the pilot showered her impoverished children with gifts and took them to the Intercontinental Hotel in downtown Nairobi, where he sometimes bathed them.

The 54-year-old British Airways pilot, Simon Wood, committed suicide last year, a coroner told a court hearing in Britain on Wednesday. Wood was able to abuse the girls because of his employment with the airline and the company's community outreach work, said lawyer Nichola Marshall.

Greece. Farm owner cleared over shotgun attack on migrant workers

A court in southern Greece on Wednesday convicted two employees at a strawberry farm for shooting and wounding 28 migrant workers protesting unpaid wages, but the farm's owner and head foreman were cleared.

The shotgun attack occurred last year in Manolada, 260 kilometres southwest of Athens, where mostly Bangladeshi migrants work, and drew international attention to the often appalling conditions facing migrant labourers at Greek farms.

The court in the city of Patras sentenced one man to 14 years and seven months in prison and the other to eight years and seven months. Both were convicted of aggravated assault and illegal use of firearms, but were freed pending their appeal.

"This decision is an outrage and a disgrace.... The court showed an appalling attitude toward the victims," said Moisis Karabeyidis, a lawyer for the victims. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indian village swept away by deadly landslide

17 bodies recovered, but rescuers anticipate finding more dead

Torrential rains triggered a massive landslide that buried a remote village in western India on Wednesday, killing at least 17 people as it swept away scores of houses and possibly trapping many more people under debris, officials said.

National rescue personnel reached the area before nightfall. But continuing rains and bad roads were hampering rescue efforts and preventing reinforcements from reaching Ambegaon, a village in Pune district in Maharashtra state, said Alok Avasthy, a National Disaster Response Force commander.

Rescuers planned to work overnight using floodlights mounted on two jeeps being sent from Pune along with earthmoving vehicles, according to Suresh Jadhav, a district official. He said 17 bodies had been recovered from under mud, rocks, trees and other debris. "Everything on the mountain came down," he said.

But with 70 homes buried and reports of another 158 hit by the landslide, rescuers anticipated more dead in the village, home to 704 people in the foothills of the Sahyadri Mountains.

The landslide hit early Wednesday morning, but details of the damage only began to trickle out several hours later. The area received 10.8 centimetres of rain on Tuesday, with a heavy downpour continuing through Wednesday.

A lack of Internet connectivity and poor cellphone service were also hampering the rescue operation.

"It's surrounded by hills and the area is very remote and rural, so it's taking us time to get there," Avasthy said.

Some 250 disaster response personnel were in the area assisting local police and medical teams who began clearing the debris. At least 100 ambulances were also sent to the area, Jadhav said.

"It is a small village and this happened very suddenly," local legislator Dilip Walse Patil told CNN-IBN TV network. Earlier Wednesday, one local commissioner, Prabhakar Deshmukh, said more than 150 people could be trapped.

'Notebook' or 'scribbler'? Survey shows Canada can be broken down into five linguistic regions, McGill prof says

LUKE SIMCOE
Metro Online

Canadian English may have less regional variation than its British and American cousins, but a recent Metro survey shows our tongues are still tied by geography.

In June, Metro ran a story on Canadian English, examining our dialect's past, present and future with the help of McGill University linguist Charles Boberg. The story included a survey — completed by nearly 1,200 readers — tracking differences in language from coast to coast.

According to Boberg, the results show the country can be broken down into five linguistic regions: B.C., the Prairies, Ontario, Quebec and Atlantic Canada.

"Regional identities are alive and well," he said.

For example, western residents refer to a summer house as a "cabin," while "cottage" dominates east of Manitoba.

And while much of the country prefers the terms "ATM" and "notebook," Atlantic speakers used the words "bank machine" and "scribbler," respectively.

Quebecers were the only respondents to prefer the term "soft drink" over "pop."

"What is most remarkable about (the) data, perhaps, is their everyday character: These are not the specialized, now often obsolescent vocabulary connected with traditional rural occupations or local landscape features, the type of variable that was used in the past to identify the older dialect enclaves of eastern Canada," Boberg said.

"Rather, they are words that most Canadians use in their daily speech."

There were also differences within regions, or between different provinces.

Saskatchewan in particular had a number of breaks with its neighbours; three-quarters of Saskatchewan respondents referred to a hooded sweater as a "bunnyhug" and residents also used "all-dressed" to refer to a pizza loaded with toppings — a term that has little traction outside Quebec.

"Maybe there's some Montrealers that moved to Saskatchewan and started the first pizza place," Boberg joked.

Quoted

"In today's interconnected, globalized world, regional differences somehow survive ... suggesting that we have a need to belong to smaller, local communities and to symbolize that membership through social behaviour, including our choices in language."

Small charity survived audit, but CRA has fresh demands

Charitable status at risk. The head of CoDev is feeling 'stressed' about complying with order to translate all documents into French or English

A small Vancouver charity that helps the poor in Latin America has survived an audit of its political activities but is now struggling with fresh demands from the Canada Revenue Agency.

CoDevelopment Canada Association — known as CoDev — faces the crippling prospect of translating every scrap of paper it receives from 17 partners in El Salvador, Nicaragua, Honduras and elsewhere from Spanish into either English or French.

The demand, set out in a January compliance letter from the CRA, will start to bite this fall as the tiny four-person shop begins to receive banker's boxes full of Spanish-language documents from its Latin American projects, including taxi chits and bus-fare receipts.

The group's executive director, Barbara Wood, says the newly imposed requirement will drain away scarce resources, yet must be carried out or CoDev risks losing its charitable status.

"It makes me feel uncertain and a little bit stressed," Wood said in an interview. "I'm feeling fairly vulnerable." THE CANADIAN PRESS

New class of audits

The case is an example of how the CRA's 52 political-activity audits currently underway can end badly for a non-profit organization, even if it manages to pass the new class of audits instituted by the Harper government in 2012.

- Many of the charities under audit have been critics of government policy, including CoDev, a trade union-funded group that has raised questions about Canada's free-trade deal with Colombia, among other issues.

WHEN SOMEONE GREAT IS GONE

HE SAYS

John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

What have I become?

Back in my youth (2010), I wrote a column about not owning a cellphone. Even then, it was such an unusual state of affairs that a Calgary talk-radio station called me for an interview about it.

Sample excerpt: HOST: So you don't have a cellphone? ME: No. HOST: Wow.

Then, in 2011, in an example of how consistent and steadfast I am when I believe in something, I bought a cellphone.

I was using it all the time, only looking up from the screen for automobile crashes, and then only to Instagram them.

My phone was a part of me. I'd become everything I'd ever mildly disliked.

Now, years later, allow me to share the third chapter of this tragedy: My cellphone isn't working properly and it's killing me. What's saddest is that the phone still works. It's just charging inconsistently, sometimes leaving me without access for a few hours, tops.

But I'm like a heroin addict who knows his product and can tell the hit's been stepped on a few too many times. (NOTE: All drug lingo accurate as of Season 5 of The Wire.)

I sicken myself, and not only because this column has more "i"s in it than a new Apple product's press release.

I'm glued to my phone, and for the dumbest reasons: Facebook. Twitter. Video games that aren't even as good as the ones from the '80s.

Who goes through withdrawal for these things? Here's how bad it is: There was a story in the news this week about a huge solar flare that could have disabled all electronics on Earth and my first thought, I swear to God, was "Oh, my poor phone!"

Life on Earth would have been set back decades and all I could think about was dozens of Angry Birds suddenly squawking out in terror, then suddenly silenced.

In the movies people who get hooked up to supercomputers always become hyper-intelligent demi-gods with aspirations of world domination.

Reality suggests the person would become a drooling cyber-cypher whose message for the world would be random messages of "THIS!" "WANT!" and "SO MUCH THIS!"

First we squandered television's potential, now we're wasting the Internet's.

If the abacus had been invented this week, we'd use the beads to make clacking noises and penis shapes.

I asked who goes through withdrawal for these things. Well, everybody, near as I can tell. What have I become? You and you and YOU.

So at least I'm not alone. Who says technology is pulling us apart?

New York-based artist Sam Van Aken has brought together a plethora of fruit trees to create supertrees with the capacity to grow more than 40 different varieties of fruit.

Created through the process of grafting, the Tree of 40 Fruit appears as a regular tree most of the year, but in spring its chimera nature reveals itself when it blossoms in variegated tones of pink, white and crimson. Come summer, it bears a multitude of fruit, including peach, plum, apricot, nectarine, cherry and almond. METRO

Self-harmie? Snafuie? Pick your portmanteau

ANDREW FIFIELD
andrew.fifield@metronews.ca

Look, if we're going to continue with the reckless endangerment in pursuit of that perfect daredevil selfie, then we're also going to need a word for any misfortune that results. The portmanteau era demands it.

So what's it going to be? What do we call something like this, where our selfie-snapping hero nearly finds himself on the business end of a bull at a French festival? A self-harmie? A snafuie? There should also be a word to describe society's failure in not coming up with this already. (lexflex freeman/YouTube)

Festival and Tim Williams put Calgary on the blues map

Bluesfest. Close to 20,000 fans expected at weekend festival featuring local star and other artists from around the world

BACKSTAGE PASS
Lisa Wilton
calgary@metronews.ca

In the past decade, more and more local festivals and one-off events have been vying for audiences during Calgary's short summer season.

Although being spoiled for choice is great for the fans, event organizers are finding it harder to attract the crowds they want or deserve.

"The weather is as much a competitor as anything," says Cindy McLeod, producer of the annual Calgary International Blues Festival, which runs until Sunday at Shaw Millennium Park and The Kerby Centre.

"We suffer long winters and people are keen to be outdoors, and it's always a challenge to get the word out."

But McLeod believes Bluesfest has the right ingredients for a memorable weekend.

This year's lineup features a variety of sounds, from the Chicago blues of Billy Branch and the Sons of Blues to the impeccable musicianship of Serbian guitarist Ana Popovic and local favourite Tim Williams.

"Aside from the fact that Tim is an amazing musician, he's expert raconteur," McLeod explains.

"He's very engaging on stage and brings a lot of underpinnings to the music and helps people understand it. He's very informed and has a good grasp of blues history."

Williams' talent hasn't gone unnoticed outside of Calgary. In fact, McLeod says he's helping raise the profile of Calgary's burgeoning blues scene.

Earlier this year, Williams won two major awards, including best solo act, at the 30th annual International Blues Challenge in Memphis.

"That really put a lot of eyes on Calgary," she says.

Bluesfest is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year and McLeod says its enduring success is due to the hard work of volunteers spreading the word, as well as the welcoming atmosphere at the festival site and after-parties.

"People like sincerity and authenticity," she says.

"Blues has a strong element of that. And it's danceable. The shows are inclusive, and most events are all ages."

A founding producer of the Calgary International Blues Festival, McLeod took over all programming and producing duties after former artistic director Maurice Ginzer left the organization last year.

"It was a lot of work to get the festival off the ground this year," she says.

"But I'm so excited. The tenth year is really meaningful. It's a great lineup and there seems to be a lot of awareness this year. The festival has caught its stride."

Waters happy under his own thumb

Subversive storyteller. Auteur and author John Waters unsure if he'll make another film as he promotes latest book Carsick

Comical cult legend John Waters says he doesn't know if he'll make another film again, and he's fine with that.

After writing and directing over a dozen features, he's found happiness in penning books as it gets harder and harder to secure financing for new big-screen projects.

"I want to make another movie, but if I don't, I have many ways to tell my stories," Waters said in an interview to promote his seventh book, Carsick. "They want me to make (films) on the budgets I made Female Trouble and Polyester, and I can't be a faux underground filmmaker at 68.

"It's just like when they wanted me to come to Occupy Baltimore. I'm for it, I'm for all anarchy kids," said the gay writer-director-actor.

"But, at the same time, I said, 'I own three homes and a summer rental. I can't really be too much of an anarchist.' Brigid Berlin, the great Warhol star, said to me ... 'How can we be bad at 70?' What a great line that was. That we even want to be, at 70."

The baddest thing Waters has done lately? Hitchhiking from his Baltimore house to his apartment in San Francisco for Carsick, now on shelves.

The book begins with fictionalized hitchhiking scenarios he imagined might happen to him on the road. It then gives a humorous account of his actual 2012 trip, with his drivers including a minister's wife, a young man in a red Corvette and a coal miner.

His cover was eventually blown after he was picked up by the indie band Here We Go Magic and they tweeted about it, leading to a flurry of posts about his adventure on social media.

Holding out his thumb roadside with a cardboard sign and signature pencil-thin moustache gave him a new outlook on Middle America, said the writer-director of 1988's Hairspray and 1994's Serial Mom.

"I always said before, I do great in the high life and the low life — I can do well at the Cannes Film Festival, I do well in prison, I don't do well in a shopping mall.

"But I think that changed, because I think Middle America is different now. I think people have changed. I think it's all because of the Internet and the global community and everything.

"Everybody's better, everybody's a little cooler, everybody's a little less judgmental. Even Republicans, even people that I don't believe in their politics at all."

Before Waters embarked on the trip, he didn't want to push being recognized by his drivers. "But once I stood there for 10 hours, are you kidding? I prayed somebody would recognize me," he said. "When I had to walk down in those Holiday Inns at 7 in the morning to those breakfast rooms with the truckers, I was prayin' somebody would recognize me, but they usually never did."

Waters battled rainy weather, stayed in motels and dined at truck stops and fast-food restaurants on his trip, which his assistants tracked via GPS.

Some passersby and patrons at rest stops offered him money, thinking he was homeless.

"In the beginning you say, 'I wouldn't get in a car like this, I wouldn't do this.' But by the time you're really out there doing it for five days, I said I'd get in Ted Bundy's car."

Gwyneth Paltrow

Paltrow and Martin still consciously uncoupling — just don't snap a pic

Here's some rather bizarre behaviour for you: Gwyneth Paltrow attended the premiere and after-party for new film Hector and the Search for Happiness with estranged husband Chris Martin, but then decided they probably shouldn't be photographed together. That led to an odd series of photos that included the singer ducking into the back seat of their SUV and trying to hide behind decorative shrubbery.

Billy Bob was too late to be Saved by the Bell

What with his Emmy-nominated performance on Fargo, Billy Bob Thornton definitely has a taste for television now. And he's got a few ideas about other shows on which he'd like to appear. "There's so much good stuff on TV," he tells E! News. "Maybe I can play what's his name? Hodor on Game of Thrones, the guy who only says, 'Hodor.' Maybe I could be his cousin or something, his long-lost cousin." Of course, life is not without regret, as Thornton jokes that he came to television too late for one dream role. "Saved by the Bell is not on anymore, so I think I missed my chance," he says.

Bloom and Biebs brawl almost too good to be true

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Orlando Bloom is a tough guy to piss off. He has one of the most charmed, stress-free existences going, and he knows it. He's handsome, he's got a fancy British accent and his status as a movie star remains unchallenged despite not doing much noteworthy beyond the Lord of the Rings. The man generally walks around with an "Isn't it awesome being me?" grin on his face. So getting him riled up has to be a challenge. And you know who's up to that challenge? Justin Bieber.

Bloom and the Biebs were living it up (separately) at Cipriani's in Ibiza — because of course they were — when some bad blood between the pair erupted into Bloom taking a swing at Bieber. "Justin was at one table, and Orlando was at another," a source tells Page Six. "But when Bieber and his party were later walking past Bloom's table, Orlando refused to shake Bieber's hand." Then, "Bieber said something rude to Orlando, like, 'She was good.'" That comment was apparently about Bloom's ex-wife, Miranda Kerr, a Victoria's Secret model who has previously had to spend time with Bieber because being a Victoria's Secret model is actually a terrible, terrible job.

People, this is amazing. This is gossip Christmas. Wispy, non-threatening millionaires trying to slap-fight in an Ibiza nightclub with Diddy and Paris Hilton looking on? It's so perfect I almost don't believe it. But there's video of the incident, so maybe the universe really is just this rewarding.

Hours after fleeing the scene, Bieber took the only recourse that feels natural to him: social-media taunting. He posted a photo of Kerr in a bikini to his Instagram account, then quickly deleted it — but not before it could get more than 94,000 likes. Sick burn, bro.

First comes the baby for Scarlett Johansson

Don't expect to see Scarlett Johansson in a wedding dress until after she finishes up with this whole being pregnant thing, according to Us Weekly. "She is telling friends that she is not getting married until after the baby," a source explains. There's no word on when her baby with French fiancé Romain Dauriac is due, but with her work on Avengers 2 complete and her promotional duties for Lucy behind her, Johansson is said to be taking it easy and enjoying her pregnancy.

A Roland Mouret mash-up? Now that's Banana's!

Nine-to-five knockout. Celebrated French designer's collection for Banana Republic on its way to Canadian stores

TINA CHADHA
Metro World News

HR, beware: The workplace is about to get a whole lot sexier.

The latest in the world of high/low designer collaborations has arrived.

French designer Roland Mouret is bringing his sexy, fitted dresses to Banana Republic for a limited-edition capsule heavy on the brand's signature stretchy Sloan fabric.

The Banana Republic Sloan fabric is a unique blend of rich, bi-stretch fabric, which creates a "magic" fit that shapes through figure-flattering silhouettes.

Mouret, famous for his exceptional skills in draping, structure and style, naturally gravitated toward this signature material, which he hand-draped, cut and pinned on the body to create this iconic capsule.

Model Karolina Kurkova poses with Roland Mouret in a behind-the-scenes campaign shoot for his upcoming collection. CONTRIBUTED

The nearly 30-piece collection will shine a light on Mouret's craftsmanship talents through the use of this dynamic fabric.

"The common goal for this collection is to offer incredible fit through an assortment of hourglass silhouettes," says the designer, who is also focusing on "extending my love of structure into accessible prices." Score.

The collection will be available at select stores across Canada and online at bananarepublic.ca on August 7, 2014.

Candy-coloured kitchen

Bright ideas. Adding paintbox colours to the kitchen creates a vibrant modern look Kitchens in traditional and vintage homes often are dressed in conservative garb: neutral hues, stainless steel, white-on-white or beige-on-beige.

Historically, however, kitchens were actually pretty peppy, according to Deborah Baldwin, editor of This Old House magazine.

"Pastel greens, blues, creams and peaches reigned until the early 1930s, when casual, built-in eating areas were painted Kelly green, red and even black," she says.

"We have readers who are introducing brightly coloured cabinets and appliances in tomato, pumpkin and daisy," she adds.

At this spring's Architectural Digest Home Design Show in New York, manufacturers were showing lots of vibrantly hued kitchen equipment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A range of colours

Bertazzoni's Arancio range came in orange, burgundy and yellow. Big Chill displayed a wall full of paint-box hues including jadite (a milky green), cherry and pink. AGA's Signature line of beefy, professional-grade ranges comes in intriguing colours like aubergine, duck-egg blue, heather, pistachio, claret and British racing green. (www.bertazzoni.com; www.bigchill.com; www.aga-ranges.com)

With strong colour trending in kitchens, Big Chill's vibrant hues in fridges, ovens and range hoods hit the style mark. As a pop of colour in an otherwise low-key kitchen, or as part of an overall exuberant space, appliances like these — particularly with some retro details — stand out from the standard stainless offerings. Spice route leads to unique flavours

This recipe serves four. RYLAND PETERS & SMALL

Thai-Spiced Rare Beef and Warm Rice Noodle Salad. This recipe employs a red curry paste marinade

1. To make the marinade, mix the lemongrass, curry paste, fish sauce and lime juice, then place the beef in a shallow dish and cover with the marinade. Cover and refrigerate.

2. Heat the oil in a frying pan/skillet over medium heat and fry the marinated beef (reserving any remaining marinade) for 2 minutes each side. Remove from the pan, cover and set aside. In the same pan, quickly fry the bamboo shoots and peanuts with any remaining marinade. Add the spinach to the pan, immediately remove from the heat and cover with a lid to allow the spinach to wilt in the residual heat.

3. Blanch the noodles in a pan of boiling water for 5 minutes or until cooked. Drain and toss in the sesame oil, spring onions/scallions, Nuóc Cham and half the coriander/cilantro. Meanwhile, thinly slice the beef and keep warm.

4. Dress the courgettes/zucchini with the lime juice, the remaining coriander/cilantro and the salt.

5. To serve, divide the noodles between 4 warm plates, then pile the remaining ingredients on top. Garnish with the sliced chilies.

RECIPE FROM THE EASY KITCHEN: ASIAN FOOD (2014; RYLAND PETERS AND SMALL, RYLANDPETERS.COM)

Ingredients

Marinade
- 1 lemongrass stick, very finely chopped
- 2 tsp Thai red curry paste
- 2 tsp nam pla fish sauce
- Freshly squeezed juice of 1/2 lime

- 400 g (14 oz) fillet steak/beef tenderloin
- 1 tbsp sunflower oil
- 100 g (3 1/2 oz) bamboo shoots, finely shredded
- 100 g (2/3 cup) roasted salted peanuts, coarsely ground
- 200 g (6 1/2 oz) baby spinach leaves
- 500 g (1 lb) thin rice noodles
- 1 tsp toasted sesame oil
- 8 spring onions/scallions, thinly sliced
- 3 tbsp Nuóc Cham (a fish sauce dipping sauce that can be found at Asian markets)
- 2 handfuls of fresh coriander/cilantro, finely chopped
- 2–3 baby courgettes/zucchini, sliced into ribbons with a mandolin or potato slicer
- Freshly squeezed juice of 1/2 lime
- A pinch of salt
- 2 thin red chilies, thinly sliced

KEEP YOUR COSTS UNDER CONTROL

FIND QUALITY BACK-TO-SCHOOL ITEMS

Back-to-school shopping season is here and the fashion shopping choices are staggering.

How can parents keep costs under control while still getting a good selection of quality items?

Try shopping second-hand.

Consider two moms: Nina and Sarah.

Both have two growing kids that constantly need new clothing, particularly for the coming school year. Nina buys new. Sarah buys second-hand.

Nina is budget conscious and loves finding deals, but she only shops for children's clothing at stores that sell new items.

When Nina buys new, she finds that shoes, jeans, shirts and other basics each cost $20 or more, so when Nina shops for her two children she often spends more than $100 on each.

And when Nina wants to purchase high-quality and brand-name items for her kids, the price gets even higher.

Sarah, on the other hand, purchases clothing for her children second-hand at Value Village. On the Value Village racks, Sarah finds incredible deals: Most items cost between $3 and $10. She can find a whole outfit for each child — shirt, jeans, shoes, coat — for less than $30.

Since Value Village hand-picks only the best-quality items to be sold in the store, Sarah has plenty of options for very good value. She finds name-brand clothing and household items for much less than Nina is paying for pieces of the same quality.

The selection at Value Village is great, too. Sarah finds just as much or more selection on the racks in the children's section than Nina does in a department store. Value Village is a treasure trove of pieces that Sarah's children love.

Nina's shopping choices are also less environmentally friendly than Sarah's. By purchasing second-hand clothing, Sarah is helping to reduce the number of items that go to the landfill.

Back-to-school deals happen every day at Value Village.

Work the racks for the best deals

Second-hand shopping for your kids is quite different from buying new.

Malee Perera is a mom based in Vancouver who buys about 50 per cent of her eight-year-old son's wardrobe from second-hand stores, including Value Village.

Here's how she makes the most of her thrift shopping experience:

ESTABLISH YOUR CRITERIA

Learn to sift through the unique pieces and find something that's right for you. Perera assesses criteria, including the quality of the fabric and construction of the clothing item, what condition it's in and whether it's something she thinks would suit her son's sense of style.

IF YOU DON'T FIND ANYTHING, JUST COME BACK IN A DAY OR TWO

Value Village stocks an ever-changing selection of about 100,000 items, and since 5,000 to 10,000 new items come into each store every day, there's always something new.

"That is what's so great about second-hand shopping," Perera says. "Sometimes I'll find a couple of things I like one day, and then I'll find 10 things another day."

The same goes for shopping at different locations, Perera says. If she doesn't find what she's looking for at one store, she tries another. There are more than 125 Value Village locations across Canada.

STOCK UP

"Sometimes when I go to Value Village, I won't find anything that my son can use right now, but I will find something that will be useful a few months from now," Perera says. "If you see it and know you'll need it later, buy it now."

LOOK FOR DEALS

Shopping at Value Village is a great deal on its own, but shoppers can find even more deals if they know where and when to look.

Value Village shoppers can get even more deals by signing up for a Super Savers Club Card. The card gives members discounts on select items, and members get updates on upcoming sales and deals.

Esks' Reilly better than rest in July

Edmonton quarterback Mike Reilly has been named the CFL's offensive player of the month for his role in the team's resurgent start to the 2014 season.

Reilly passed for 1,142 yards on 110-for-173 passing (63.6 per cent) and threw for nine touchdowns to help lead the Eskimos to a 4-1 start.

Saskatchewan defensive end John Chick was named the defensive player for July, Toronto kicker/punter Swayze Waters took the special teams award and B.C. running back Andrew Harris was named top Canadian. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New coaches hired, managers shuffled around

The Montreal Canadiens hired Dan Lacroix as assistant coach and Rob Ramage as player development coach, and also gave new responsibilities to some management personnel on Wednesday.

He worked as an assistant coach in the NHL for seven of the past eight seasons, including last season with the Eastern Conference champion New York Rangers. He previously worked as assistant coach with the Tampa Bay Lightning from 2010 to 2013 and with the New York Islanders from 2006 to 2009. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Under-17 men's hockey camp. Respect top of mind as teens from all over Canada lace up for drills and seminars in Calgary

It didn't take long for "the Canadian way" to become a mantra at Hockey Canada's massive under-17 men's hockey camp.

The slogan is on the back of every red T-shirt worn by the 108 players circulating through the Markin MacPhail Centre on Calgary's west side. The phrase is drilled into their heads on and off the ice by their coaches and Hockey Canada staff.

"They use that term almost in every sentence," Toronto defenceman Jakob Chychrun said Wednesday. "They really teach us all to be young men.

"They talk about professionalism, respect and even the little things like cleaning the table up after lunch."

Part of the revamp of the national under-17 program was summoning this vast group of players born from 1998 onwards to learn early what Hockey Canada expects and wants from players who wear the Maple Leaf. The nine-day camp ends Tuesday.

"We've had a lot of lectures on the Canadian way and what that means to us and how we have to respect it," defenceman Sean Day said.

"That's one of the most used words I've heard in the last two days is 'respect.' Just having pride in your nation and respecting everyone who is involved and respecting your opponents."

Their days have been filled with fitness and hockey skills testing as well as classroom seminars on nutrition, mental training and media relations. They're learning how to warm up and cool down properly for workouts and games in order to avoid injury and perform their best.

Players from Duncan, B.C., to Mount Pearl, N.L., have been divided into six teams with their own coaches and support staff. They start playing games against each other Thursday.

"The message to them is there's a way we do things here," said Scott Salmond, Hockey Canada's vice-president of hockey operations. "What we're trying to teach them in the different areas, we're going to have a better chance to win." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Blue Jays up five straight, Boston suffers

Mark Buehrle leaves the game with the Jays holding a 6-1 lead over the Red Sox in the seventh inning at Fenway Park in Boston. ELISE AMENDOLA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mark Buehrle pitched 6 2/3 innings to earn his first win in almost two months and Dioner Navarro had three hits and three RBIs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to their fifth consecutive victory, a 6-1 win over the slumping Boston Red Sox on Wednesday.

Buehrle (11-7) allowed one run on six hits and a walk, striking out two to snap a six-game losing streak that matched the longest of his career.

He had not won in nine starts since earning his ninth consecutive victory on June 1.

Toronto has won eight of its last nine games and trails first-place Baltimore by 2 1/2 games.

Brandon Workman (1-4) fell behind quickly after being called up from Triple-A to replace trade bait Jon Lester.

The all-star left-hander was originally scheduled to start for Boston, but he was scratched while his name is bandied about ahead of Thursday's trade deadline.

As the Red Sox went down in the ninth, fans remaining from the sellout crowd chanted, "Jonny Lester!" THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crouching Tiger, hidden playoff hope

Golf. Next two events critical for Woods in his bid to prolong season shortened by surgery

Tiger Woods finds out over the next two weeks if his season is over or just getting started.

The first stop is Firestone, where Woods is an eight-time winner and the defending champion. After that, he heads to Valhalla Golf Club for the PGA Championship, where he won in 2000 on his way to an unprecedented sweep of the majors.

At stake is a chance to extend a season already cut short by back surgery.

"I would like to win these two events and not have to worry about anything," Woods said Wednesday. "That's the plan. That's the mindset. That's the focus. We'll see how it falls after these few weeks. I'm so far out of it right now that I need to play well to ... get myself into the playoffs and ultimately — hopefully — play all four weeks."

It's hard to believe that just one year ago, Woods won this World Golf Championship by seven shots for his fifth victory of the year.

Not much has gone his way since then, mainly because of back pain that eventually led to surgery on March 31 and kept him out for three months. The Bridgestone Invitational will be only his third tournament since his return from surgery a month ago at Congressional, where he missed the cut.

And during his time at home, his position in the FedEx Cup standings plunged.

Woods is No. 215 — only the top 125 qualify for the playoffs.

At least he is playing courses that bring happy memories.

Woods has been so dominant at Firestone that he averages $10,138 for every hole he has played in competition dating to 1997. His victory last year was the third time he had won at Firestone by at least seven shots.

But Firestone also is the course where he finished 30 shots out of the lead in 2010, a week before he hooked up with Sean Foley, his third swing coach as a pro.

Soccer. Reds push past City on kicks

Simon Mignolet saved two penalty kicks and Lucas Leiva scored in the fourth round to lift Liverpool past Manchester City after they tied 2-2 on Wednesday night in an International Champions Cup game in New York City.

Liverpool's Raheem Sterling curled in a goal in the 85th minute to tie it at 2 at Yankee Stadium in front of 49,653 fans. Emre Can and Jordan Henderson also converted penalty kicks for Liverpool in the Pool B game.

Stevan Jovetic scored two goals, for a second consecutive match, for Premier League champion Manchester City.

Sprint star denies panning Games

Even before stepping on the track, Usain Bolt is causing a stir in Glasgow.

A day after mingling with British royalty at the Glasgow athletes' village, Bolt scrambled Wednesday to deny that he made derogatory comments about the so-called "Friendly Games."

The Jamaican sprint star, was quoted as telling The Times of London on Tuesday that he was "not really" having fun in Glasgow and the games were "a bit s—."

Bolt took to Twitter to complain: "I'm waking up to this nonsense..journalist please don't create lies to make headlines."

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Are you closer to reaching the targets you set yourself at the start of the year? If not, it may be time to adjust your sights.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
A colleague will let you down today and you won't be happy. But don't let it bother you because you're capable of making a success of a project on your own.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Shove any worries you might have to the back of your mind. The Sun in Leo at this time of year brings all sorts of social and travel opportunities.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Don't be hard on yourself if you haven't yet reached the heights you're aiming for. There is no time limit by which you have to be rich, famous or whatever else you think you should be.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
The past is of no concern. The only thing that matters is the future. Take each day as it comes and don't bother looking too far ahead. Your life will always be guided in the right direction.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Don't tell others what they want to hear, tell them what they need to hear. A dose of reality is the only medicine to cure their ills and you are the one to demonstrate its efficacy.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Winning is important to you but sometimes you take it too far and expect too much of yourself. What happens today will remind you how good the simple things in life can be.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Try something you have never done before. Others may not approve but, if anything, that will make you more determined to go through with it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Others can waste their money if they wish but you have people depending on you and that means you must stay focused on what is important. You're a lot more responsible than most.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It may seem others are trying to make life difficult for you but likely you're making life difficult for yourself. What happens in the world "out there" depends on what goes on in your head.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Each time you think you're making progress someone changes the rules! The universe is trying to show you there are no hard and rules at all.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
It may annoy you that a friend insists on everything being done their way but go with it. If it's a success you'll share the glory. If it's a failure it's their fault.
